

ABSTRACT

A display device for displaying samples of a plurality of different materials to potential purchasers. The display device includes an array of display panels pivotally mounted to a first side of a rack. Underlying display panels of the array have free edges with material samples mounted thereon extending beyond free edges of overlying display panels. A story-board portion of the rack is only partially visible behind the array of display panels.